...works along these ideas:

Our environment has reached a degree of complexity that makes solving personal or professional problems by oneself sometimes difficult, timeconsuming or downright impossible.

I see it as my task to provide my clients with the most effective instrument for a particular situation: in one instance this may be a purely systemic approach in the sense of „help to help yourself“, in another know-how transfer and yet another a recommendation for an executable course of action.

My work is guided by the principle of unconditional positive regard for my clients and their problems, and founded on a broad spectrum of experience, methodology and knowledge.
